Wednesday, December 10, 7:00 PM Membership Meeting- Saving the Prairie Chicken

. Bob Gillespie, Natural Resources Coordinator at Prairie Ridge State Natural Area will give a presentation on the latest efforts to save the Greater Prairie Chicken. Once commonly found in over 92 of Illinois 102 counties, the Greater Prairie Chicken's numbers now teeter on the verge of extirpation in the prairie state. In early 2014, population estimates were down to less than 100 birds. With financial assistance from USFWS, Illinois Audubon Society, and Illinois Department of Natural Resources, a plan was launched to augment our Illinois population with birds from Kansas. Bob coordinated this effort. Learn the science behind bringing back a species from the brink of extinction and how Illinois is restoring habitat to bring the booming grounds back to the prairie state.

December-Christmas Bird Counts

Dates for the Peoria, Chautauqua and Chillicothe Christmas Bird Counts will be updated at the Peoria Audubon website as they are finalized.

Audubon Adventures

Audubon Adventures is an environmental education program for children in grades 3 to 5. Developed by professional environmental educators, Audubon Adventures presents standards-based science content about birds, wildlife and their habitats. With captivating hands-on activities, students learn that we all have a personal stake in the health of the environment and play an important role in its preservation and future.

Peoria Audubon Society provides the Audubon Adventures program to 35 classrooms in 13 different area schools. Peoria Audubon Society's Education Chair, Carol Borders, connects area teachers with the program. Cost is around $50 per classroom for paper copies, with digital programming now available as well. Donations are always appreciated for this excellent program. If interested, please send donations specified to Audubon Adventures to

The Squirrel Game

Susy Turner

As kids, my brothers and I loved playing The Squirrel Game with our mom. Mom loved feeding and watching the birds, but it drove her crazy when the squirrels and chipmunks stole the bird seed. Unfortunately for Mom, we lived in an oak forest with a large and healthy squirrel population. During the cold months, it seemed that Mom's full-time job was chasing the squirrels away from the bird feeders. She'd sit at the kitchen table with the newspaper or paperwork and every time a squirrel approached the feeders, she'd bang on the windows and make a loud CH! CH! sound.

CH! CH! was often our morning wake-up call and then we heard it countless times throughout the day. As the oldest child, it was my job to point out to my brothers how funny this was. We quickly learned to occasionally work the word "squirrel" into conversation because it always resulted in a quietly muttered CH! This was The Squirrel Game. It was hilarious and never got old. As a kid I enjoyed the squirrels because they bugged Mom so much.

As an adult, I understand my mom's frustration. It's tough to fill a large feeder that would last the birds a week or more and have it emptied by little chipmunks in under an hour. I've watched a pair of squirrels make off with an entire suet block a bit at a time. These rodents are obsessive!

However, they're also pretty fun to watch. Their acrobatic antics of getting around every baffle and supposedly squirrel-proof feeder are brilliant. I had one squirrel figure out how to bounce off my window to get to a hanging feeder no other squirrel had previously managed to raid. It was an impressive feat, but apparently not terribly difficult since I was soon jumping in surprise over and over at the BOOM on the window as squirrel after squirrel copied the trick and stole the bird seed.

I always have to laugh when the squirrels taunt my dogs. They seem to know exactly how far they can push themselves to maximize the dogs' frustration while staying safe and having fun. I laugh even more when the squirrels get upset and chatter louder and louder when the dogs stop paying attention to them. In the end, I'm glad the squirrels are around. They're worth the extra food and occasionally if I give them some corn and nuts they leave the bird seed alone for a while.

Craig Frank, Ph.D., associate professor of biology at Fordham University, has been studying the effects of climate change on hibernating chipmunks. He found that 87% of chipmunks that go through their normal hibernation cycle survive to the next year. However, in exceptionally warm winters when few chipmunks hibernate, none of the non-hibernating chipmunks in the studies survived. This shows that global warming could have devastating effects on the chipmunk population if they aren't able to adapt to the warmer temperatures. I hope chipmunks are around to steal my bird seed forever.

"Bob" the bobtailed squirrel stealing food from my feeders. He doesn't need a tail to have amazing balance and acrobatic skills!
